$10,000 Additional!!

Mrs. William Douglas Sloane has sent an additional $10,000 to the Building Fund as a Memorial to her husband, Resolutions to whose memory are published in this issue.

RESOLUTIONS

Passed at a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Seamen's Church Institute of New York, April 21st, 1915.

RESOLVED, that by the death of William Douglas Sloane this Society has lost one of its greatest and best friends.

Mr. Sloane served for four years as a member of the Advisory Building Committee, and gave most valuable counsel and advice during the planning and erection of our new Institute. He was one of the first large subscribers to the Building Fund, and as the project increased in size and importance he continued to enlarge his subscription. Mr. Sloane's breadth of vision and his grasp of the possibilities for the seamen of America's greatest port, were of enormous help to those immediately engaged in this undertaking.

He will be deeply mourned and sadly missed in the constructive work that lies before us in which he took such a lively interest.

A public spirited citizen, proud of New York, and ever ready to work for her advancement, he sought instinctively the large side of every question, and his guiding genius is lost to us at a time when our need is greatest.

RESOLVED, that this record be made of our deep appreciation of his invaluable services and generosity, and that a copy thereof be sent to Mrs. Sloane.

Ice Cream Maker Taken.

With her check of $500 Miss Lois Church Scoville has made the Ice Cream Machine another of her gifts to the Institute. By using this machine, operated by our own refrigerating plant, fifty quarts of ice cream can be made in a quarter of an hour. This means a saving of over 55% on the ice cream which we formerly bought outside.

Class Room Taken.

The gift of $1500 for the Class Room, made by Mrs. Samuel W. Bridgham, will interest all the Institute's friends. So many vitally important things have been discussed in this Class Room and so much actual improvement of the sailor mind has taken place here, that it is particularly opportune for the room to be given just at this time.

Officers of the Fleet To Inspect Institute

Invitations have been sent to the commanding and junior officers of all the battleships, flagships, cruisers and submarines now in our port, asking that they and their friends should inspect the "new building for the Seamen of the Merchant Marine" on Wednesday, May 12th, from four to six o'clock.

Tea is to be served by the members of the Seamen's Benefit Society and it is hoped that the wives and women friends of the fleet officers will accompany them.

This is the first opportunity the Navy men have had to see what New York has erected to take care of seamen.

Hafiz Refuses Money.

"No spik English" gesticulated Hafiz with rising excitement, looking rather wildly about for an interpreter. Arab translators are not frequent about the Institute, and the Man Behind the Desk down in the Savings Department was distinctly mystified.

"He won't take this money: it's interest on the gold he deposited with us a year ago," he explained at last to the glittering eyed man from Bagdad who finally came to the rescue.

"Oh no, he can't. Mohammedans—they can't—any of them. It is against the religion to take interest. Hafiz, he very good, very devout," protested the interpreter. And Hafiz went away, virtuously content.

A Japanese Dance For Apprentices

With forty-five young apprentice boys, all wearing white duck and thirty young women in Japanese costume, the Auditorium and Apprentice Room took on the appearance of light hearted festivity which attends a fancy dress ball.

Six sailing ships in port mean an unusual number of apprentices and these boys, aged anywhere from fourteen to twenty-two years, come to the Institute for entertainment. Their recent enthusiasm for dancing induced some of the volunteer workers to give them a costume party, and it was a tremendous success.

One end of the Apprentice Room was partitioned off with Japanese screens, hung with festoons of wistaria, soft hued lights and little tables with shaded candles. In the Auditorium the floor was waxed, the Pianola replaced by a three piece orchestra (all volunteered) and boys who had never learned to waltz did the one step and hesitation with authority and—more or less—grace.

“It’s jolly nice being able to talk to some girls,” one boy, with closely curling red hair, confided to his partner, “on our last voyage we touched only at South American ports where there were no Y. M. C. A’s. or missions.”

They wanted to dance on indefinitely but supper was served about half an hour before midnight, which is early for supper, as everyone will admit. There were rice cakes and real Japanese tea—just for local color—and ices with fancy cakes. After that, the boys had to go back to their ships.

“We’ll see you Sunday,” they called out to the man who is their Best Friend.

Confirmation Class

At the evening service on May 9th, five persons were confirmed in the Institute’s Chapel of our Saviour by the Rt. Rev. Frederick Courtney, D. D. Assisting him, in the Chancel were the Reverends Archibald R. Mansfield, Edward M. Deems, D. D., Charles P. Deems and Carl F. Ljunggren.

In his address to the Confirmation Class, Bishop Courtney spoke of the need we all have of inspiration from our fellows. He said that we all rely upon each other much more than we think and, therefore, the individual is directly responsible for many more persons than he realizes. “Soldiers going into battle have confessed that at first they were frightened and strongly tempted to run away, but when they saw the courage and fearlessness of their comrades they felt suddenly exalted, ready to overcome any foe.”

In the class were Miss Ruth Babcock, William C. Ward, W. C. Jones, Frederick Merkling (a boy of fourteen) and Birt Henry Ridburg of the Institute staff.

Gifts or Memorials

The following list contains suggestions for persons wishing to make gifts or to contribute certain amounts as memorials in this new building.

Every Chapel Chair Taken

With the gifts of the past month, every chair in the Chapel has now been made a gift or memorial.

Memorial to Mr. John Lee

As a tangible expression of the high regard and affectionate remembrance in which the late Mr. John Lee was held in the Shipping Community, his many friends are contributing to a fund of $2000 which is to be donated in his memory to the Building Fund of the Seamen’s Institute.

Mr. Lee was prominently identified with the management of the White Star Line in New York, since he first arrived in the United States in 1873.

$34,200.00 To Raise

That the Board of Managers, engaged in a campaign to raise money to pay off a debt, should have been able to secure $115,800.00 during the month of April (and the first week of May) is not only exceedingly encouraging but peculiarly significant.

With campaigns for hospitals, newsboys, war relief funds, guilds and organizations of all sorts being carried on, the task of raising a $150,000 debt struck many people as little short of impossible. The optimists who said, "You will have no trouble in getting such a comparatively small sum as that," were greatly outnumbered by pessimists who said, "Of course, I don't want to discourage you, but with business conditions as they are, and with all the Belgian and Servian and Red Cross funds, I don't see how you can expect....."

However, the results prove that people who believe in the Institute and who feel that the sailor's welfare is a civic, as well as a humane, responsibility can always be relied upon for generous support.

One of the first requisites of an American Merchant Marine is that the sailor, while in our ports, shall have a clean, respectable place to stay, where his belongings and money will be safe. This problem has been solved by the Seamen's Institute for the seamen of all nations.

And it is because the solution of the problem has been made in such a thoroughly intelligent and sympathetic manner, that practically every spiritual and physical need, which the sailor recognizes, has been wisely anticipated and met.

The LOOKOUT has said this before but it will bear repetition. Every department of the Institute's work will have a new impetus, a wider activity when there is no longer any debt on the building. When everyone knows that $12,500 a year is not being spent for interest, which, when you analyze it carefully, is the most harmful expenditure a philanthropic society can have; when this is known, then increased vitality and quickened interest will be evident in every branch of the big Hotel—Y. M. C. A.—Chapel and Clearing-house for sailors.

At the luncheon on Friday, May 7th, it was decided to extend the campaign until Tuesday, June the 1st.

Between that day and the day on which the LOOKOUT goes into the hands of its readers, there are two weeks. The Board of Managers believe that they can add $34,200 to the $115,800. in that time if everyone who can, will help.

The Tragedy of May Seventh

It was at the end of the tenth luncheon of the Board of Managers, when enthusiasm over the total was at its height that news was received of the sinking of the Lusitania. Although many of them had relatives, friends and acquaintances on board, the first thought of the Board was for Mr. Charles W. Bowring, for six years one of their number, and an active member of the Building Committee. Through the efforts of Mr. Bowring, Mr. Barber and Mr. Sparks the interest and support of the 38 steamship companies (and agents) were secured during this campaign, and it was with intense regret that he was obliged to leave New York before the campaign was finished.

A cable, received at his home on Saturday morning, which has since been published in the papers, stated: "Torpedoed without warning port side; overboard starboard side; in water four hours; no ill effects." In the midst of so much depression it was with glad relief that Mr. Bowring's associates learned of his safety.

As the LOOKOUT goes to press, we are forced to admit with sorrow that Mr. Alfred G. Vanderbilt is probably among the lost.

Mr. Vanderbilt, also, was one of the Institute's friends. His gift of $10,000 to the new building made him a Founder and he felt very keenly, as a yachtsman, the tremendous improvement in the sailor himself which the Institute was certain to produce.

With able and profound editorial comment in every newspaper in the country, the LOOKOUT is scarcely justified in adding its slender wisdom to the general fund of indignation and sorrowful reflection. Long before this issue is out of the printer's hands, the United States will have declared herself in regard to this hideous tragedy.

But the LOOKOUT can voice the sentiments of all its supporters, in extending to everyone who suffers the greatest of all human losses, through the sinking of the Lusitania, the most sincere sympathy.

Advisers' Offices $200.00 Each

Opening off the corridor on the Second Floor, that corridor once referred to by a seaman as "Missionary Alley," are the four offices used by the men who work among the seamen desiring spiritual counsel and uplift.

There is the room occupied by the Scandinavian pastor where the Norwegian, Swedish and Danish sailors come for assistance; the room for the German sailors (and these men have particularly needed relief this winter); the office of the Spanish clergyman and the office of the man who looks after the apprentices.

Since these men, who visit the hospitals, take a sincere interest in sick and impoverished sailors in addition to conducting services in the Chapel, are a most valuable part of the Institute's work, their rooms should appeal at once to the ready sympathies of people who wish to give memorials to the new building. $200 is the estimated cost of building and furnishing each office.

Baking Machine $300.00

We very much need a Baking Machine for our big kitchen. In this machine, not only all the bread and cake of the Institute could be baked swiftly and with assured success, but also the thinnest pastry, often difficult to achieve. For the sailor ashore demands the toothsome short bread and short cake which the ships' galleys seldom provide.

Luncheon to Dr. Webster

On Tuesday, May 4th, the Seamen's Church Institute of New York gave a luncheon to the Rev. George W. Webster, Ph. D., Secretary of the American Seamen's Friend Society.

It was a very significant little group of men that sat about the lilac decorated tables in the Apprentice Room. They were all men who are devoting the best of their lives to the sailor problems in this port. Representing the American Seamen's Friend Society were the Rev. John B. Calvert, D. D., President, and Dr. Webster, the guest of honor. New York Port Society, Rev. Samuel Boulton; Seamen's Christian Association, Mr. Stafford Wright; Legal Aid Society, Mr. Leonard McGee, Mr. Silas B. Axtell; Y. M. C. A. Naval Branch, Brooklyn, Mr. Robert Tisdale; Sailor's Snug Harbor, Rev. Edward M. Deems, D. D.; Scandinavian Sailors' Temperance Home and Norwegian Seamen's Church, Rev. John Ekeland; New York Bible Society, Dr. George Carter, Chaplain W. C. Jones; Danish Work among Seamen, Brooklyn, Pastor R. Anderson; Longshoremen's Rest, Capt. James Nutchey, Rev. H. G. Fithian. Seamen's Church Institute of New York, Edmund L. Baylies, President, Rev. A. R. Mansfield, Superintendent, Rev. Charles P. Deems, Ass't Supt.; Rev. C. J. Ljunggren, Messrs. Howard O. Wood, M. E. Hopkins, and Mr. Allen S. Gookin of the North River Station.

After luncheon had been served Mr. Mansfield spoke briefly, saying that there were three reasons why he had extended this invitation.

1st—That these men of the various seamen societies might meet Dr. Webster. 2nd—That they might have the opportunity of looking one another in the face. And 3rd—That we might make a beginning of more effective co-operation. He referred to Dr. Stitt, for many years secretary of the American Seamen's Friend Society, dwelling with tender recollection upon his beautiful character, his kindly wisdom and sympathetic understanding. "He was the Nestor of sailor work to whom we always looked for guidance," said Mr. Mansfield, "and I feel Dr. Webster to be the same type of man to whom we shall all be glad to go for advice."

He spoke further of the tremendous possibilities for doing great things in New York when there should be stronger co-operation on the part of the heads of seamen organizations. "There is," he said, "to be a Joint Conference early in the summer which will be composed of three representatives of every organization, together with the heads of institutions. At this time various questions of legislation, crimps, etc. will be discussed and action taken."

Mr. Baylies in welcoming Dr. Webster and the representatives of the other Seamen Societies, spoke also of the importance of co-operation, unity and fellowship. He said that the value of whatever efforts were made to help the sailor could be multiplied a hundred fold when there was sympathetic alliance of power.

"We do not claim to have solved, completely, the sailor problem," he said, "it is a greater task than we can perform, for all our splendid equipment, but we hope that in this building all the world may find an ideal for the present. I earnestly hope that the day will come when what we do now shall be surpassed, and in order to have it done, to cover the whole field, we need unity. We should set for our goal the day when New York shall be known as the Port where the most is being done for the sailor!"

Dr. Webster, in a particularly delightful address, said that it had been his policy in work for sailors to become acquainted with all the experienced workers, to see what they were doing and to plan his own work to fit in with theirs. "There are three things absolutely essential in sailor work," he added, "three Vs. They are vision, vim and voice."

Vision

He said that, from a youngster, he had always wanted to climb to some high place and look about him, to see just where he was and where he was going. When he first came to New York he wanted to climb up to the peaks others had achieved to get the inspiration of their vision. And this building, with the vision it represented, was a tangible example.

Vim

"I do not know," he continued, "whether vim is the result of vision or whether vision comes as the result of effort. Sometimes, after a lifetime of effort, the vision comes out of experience—too late to bring it into reality. But if it can be caught beforehand, if the vision can be made certain, fixed in the mind and spirit of the worker, then the effort is bound to follow. I am glad to have caught your vision in this great Institute and to join in the effort your vision is creating."

Voice

As to the third V, the voice, he said that people should know who we are, what we are doing, and that the message should not come as a jargon of mixed tongues, but clearly defined, as one voice calling for aid in this work of uplifting the men of the sea.

"People will and can listen, but they will hear nothing distinctly unless we speak as one man. I always rejoice when I read in the newspapers of the increase of your fund to pay off this debt. I feel that every time the attention of the people is called to the seamen, the waterfront needs, that every society working for the same cause is benefited."

Dr. Webster was followed by Dr. Boulton, who revived some early memories of Mr. Mansfield's career in the Institute, comparing his attack on the boarding-house keepers and shipping masters to that of David upon Goliath. He added that the result was quite as miraculous. Dr. Calvert, Mr. Stafford Wright, Mr. McGee, Mr. Tisdale, Dr. Deems, Mr. Ekeland and Dr. Carter also made brief addresses in which they all expressed their eagerness and their willingness to be of service to the Institute and to each other.

Service For Fanny Crosby.

Although the April LOOKOUT was too crowded for space to make the announcement, it is not too late to refer briefly to the Memorial Service held for Fanny Crosby in the Chapel of Our Saviour on March 24th.

This blind writer of well known hymns died on February 12th, this year, aged eighty-five years old. She had been blind since she was six and probably no single quoted verse of hers could be more expressive of her character than the lines written when she was eight years old.

"O, what a happy soul am I,
Although I cannot see,
I am resolved that in this world
Contented I will be."

That she kept her childish resolution faithfully is evidenced by the cheerful optimism of her subsequent verses and melodies. Some of the best known, "Saved by Grace" "Blessed Assurance" "Rescue the Perishing" and others were sung at the service. In his address, Mr. Mansfield spoke especially of her remarkable spirit of Christian patience and of her great passion for saving men.
